

1,250,000

DAILY AVERAGE FOR SIXTY DAYS.

LARGEST EVER REACHED.

1,250,000

A MILLION AND A QUARTER A DAY.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

AND ADVERTISER.

NO. 5808.

Copyright, 1898, by W. R. Hearst—NEW YORK, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1898.—16 PAGES.

PRICE ONE CENT In Greater New York, Elsewhere, and Jersey City, TWO CENTS.

GOING TO MOVE?

Instead of running around town looking for a HOUSE, FLAT or APARTMENT and consult the Journal's "TO LET" columns.

STAY AT HOME

VOTERS MAY BE BRANDED NEXT.

McCullagh's Spies Use Ladders to Peep Into Men's Bedrooms.

Lodging House Inmates Called from Their Beds to "Answer" Deputies.

THOUSANDS LOSE VOTES.

Voters Who Were Not in 10-Cent Rooms at 12 o'Clock Saturday Night Dare Not Register.

HOW THE FORCE BILL IS TO WORK

Superintendent of State Elections McCullagh has plans to intimidate from voting Democrats to the number of 15,000. The following statistics indicate how this result is to be attained:

Number of lodging houses in New York	300
Estimated lodgers daily	75,000
Permanent guests	40,000
Transient guests	35,000
Registered after midnight Saturday	5,000
Estimated lodgers absent Saturday	15,000
Number McCullagh hopes to frighten from the polls	20,000
Proportion of Democratic votes	75 per cent

Superintendent of State Elections John McCullagh aims to deprive 20,000 New York citizens of their suffrage.

Chief of Police Devery has asked the Police Board to authorize the arrest of McCullagh's deputies for using badges, devices and clubs similar to those used by the police.

The law under which the State Superintendent of Elections for the Metropolitan District was created is seen to-day, it never before, to be a most cleverly conceived scheme to deprive of his vote the poor man whose limited means and intermittent work require a residence in a cheap lodging house.

McCullagh's emissaries began work last Saturday night. As a result, it is already evident that at least 20,000 workmen will be frightened away from lodging houses. There are three hundred lodging houses in New York. The man who lives in the ten and twenty-five cent lodging houses is not a tramp. He is a man whose income is so limited that he cannot afford to take an expensive room, or whose work is so variable that he cannot take a fixed habitation, not knowing where his employment will carry him from day to day.

Lodging houses, with few exceptions, register their guests each day, to avoid unnecessary bookkeeping. A majority of their lodgers are permanent patrons, save when their work occasionally calls them out of the city.

The machinery which Superintendent McCullagh set a work last Saturday night is seen how the scheme is to be brought to bear to frighten the lodging house resident from the polls.

McCullagh's Men in Control. At 11 o'clock two of McCullagh's deputies took possession of each lodging house in the city. A copy of the register was taken and each name recorded until the clock struck midnight. Saturday was the last day on which a voter could claim a "thirty days' residence" preceding election in an election district.

The deputies refused to take the name of a single man who came in after 12 o'clock.

Saturday night is the recreation night of the workingman. He has drawn his pay and likes to expend some of it in enjoyment. A great percentage of the men do not come in until after midnight. They may have been registering every day in the same house for years. They returned home one night after midnight they were booked by Superintendent McCullagh for jail if they attempt to register a vote.

McCullagh's deputies did move their negative work. Shortly after midnight in all houses where the night clerks did not have the right to deny them, they went through the rooms, pulled the lodgers out of bed, inquired their names and pretended to take down their descriptions. They had their hands full in some houses.

At the Alabama, No. 221 Bowers, they got Manager Pratt's story out and demanded that he produce every man on the register. Stately refused to awaken his guests. They then went about the house pounding at doors and demanding that doors be unlocked. Some guests swore and others laughed at the ruffian deputies. They procured a ladder and peeped into the rooms to see whether there was any one in the rooms, they said. About twenty guests came in after midnight, every one a permanent lodger.

"This thing is absurd and unjust," said Manager Stately last night. "There are two hundred men who receive their mail here whether in or out of town. The twenty men who registered after midnight on Saturday are not voters. About one hundred other men who were absent from town on Saturday night will hardly dare to vote unless somebody stiffens their backsides."

Effort Is to Scare Men Away.

"This wholesale intimidation of voters," continued the manager of the lodging house, "is a disgrace to New York. I believe there will be 3,500 men scared away from the polls by McCullagh's men."

Scenes similar to those at the Alabama were reported at the Grand Windsor and Chatham Square, where forty men registered after midnight. The deputies could not get into the rooms and pounded the doors until the police came. The same staid and sober act as at the Alabama.

Complaints of outrageous treatment found their way into Police Headquarters yesterday. Chief Devery called attention particularly to the arrests at No. 217 Bowers, where twenty-four men who came in after midnight Saturday were informed that they could not vote until the Olive Tree Inn, at No. 242 East Twenty-third street, where over three hundred men were compelled to wait for a personal examination in the rooms far into the morning. The same high-handed treatment occurred at every lodging house in the city. A close estimate revealed yesterday that at least 5,000 men registered at lodging houses after midnight on Saturday who were entitled to vote, and that at least 10,000 men who considered the lodging house their residence were absent from their homes on Saturday.

Superintendent McCullagh has still another scheme to deprive more votes. The lodging houses must daily report to him the name of each lodger, birthplace, residence, occupation, date, country, city, street number, color, age, height, weight, peculiarities of form, visible marks on the face, including scars, freckles, etc., and whether or not daily lodging and whether he occupies a bed. Dozens of men refuse this information. Thousands will not be at their homes every day until election. Their votes will also be challenged.

McCullagh's deputies yesterday also began to knock at the doors of law-abiding citizens, and in some cases, but this method of intimidation to date did not develop.

Devery Wants to Arrest.

Chief of Police Devery has discovered that McCullagh and his men are violating the law by wearing a similar badge and using a club to get the same as those used by the police, and has asked the Board to let him arrest the Deputy State Superintendent of Elections and perhaps McCullagh himself. The Board considered the matter yesterday and will render a decision to-day. Police Commissioner Abell indicated that the Board would approve Devery's contention by stating that McCullagh's men had no right to wear such badges. Chief Devery said yesterday:

"McCullagh has had the right to apply a badge patterned after the one used by the rascals and ward and Central Office detectives. At a distance of a few feet you cannot tell them apart. Section 339 of the charter makes it a misdemeanor for such an act."

"McCullagh knows he violates the law. He is bigoted and narrow. He designed the badges in use by the police and copied them for purposes unknown to me with evident intention."

In reply to Chief Devery Superintendent McCullagh said: "Devery is now on record. I am not. If Chief Devery wants to arrest my men let him go ahead. I don't want to criticize any act of Chief Devery. Let him do his duty and I'll do mine."

MR. SIMON SAYS: KEEP PHILIPPINES.

New Senator from Oregon Would Hold All Islands and Increase Army and Navy.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 10.—Senator-elect Joseph Simon, in an interview regarding his course on the pending questions which will come before Congress to-day, said:

"I favor the retention of the entire Philippine group, and I should not agree to the ratification of a treaty that renounces any portion of them to Spain. I am for Government control and control of the New Philippines, and I favor a Pacific cable. I am for a larger standing army and a greater navy."

An especially anxious for the firm establishment of the gold standard and reform of the currency, Simon said that the Government paper obligations and creation of a banking currency. "These measures are of great urgency," he said, "and because postponement can only result in disaster when the next inevitable financial difficulties arise."

NO GRACE FOR THE SULTAN.

Powers Remain Firm in Their Determination to Get Turkish Troops Out of Crete.

Paris, Oct. 10.—If the statement published in the Le Matin is correct, the foreign ambassadors at Constantinople have refused to modify the terms of their ultimatum to the Porte.

It is stated that the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Crete must be made by the time specified, and Le Matin further announces that a favorable reply to this demand is expected on Wednesday.

MORE PICKETS WATCH STRIKERS.

Paris Authorities Increase the Military Guards, Though Declaring the Situation Much Calmer.

Paris, Oct. 10.—The strike situation here is much calmer. Only one band of strikers needed dispersal to-day. But as a matter of precaution the military pickets were further increased.

Several meetings of workmen took place during the day at the Bourse du Travail, and resolutions favoring a continuance of the strike were passed.

LOOTED & BOARDING HOUSE AT HIS EASE.

Its Mistress Left Him in Charge, and He Robbed Her.

Mrs. Annie Mason, the keeper of a boarding house at No. 146 West Twenty-fourth street, visited a sister, who keeps the Knickerbocker Hotel, in Macdonald street, on Sunday night, leaving the house in charge of Edward Stuart, a negro servant, who worked for her several months. A Miss Wilson, a leader, was the only other person in the house.

During the night Stuart, who was a person, picked up all the jewelry and clothing he could find, loaded it on an express wagon and carried it to the city. Mrs. Mason returned home yesterday morning she found that her house had been thoroughly looted.

Union Printers Meet in Syracuse.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The forty-fourth session of the International Typographical Union opened here this morning and will be in session for three days. Address of welcome was delivered by President Conroy, of Syracuse Union No. 38, and the Rev. Dr. Jeremiah Zimmerman, President of W. P. Prescott, of the International organization, responded.

Lockjaw's Victim Still Alive.

Yesterday was the third day that fifteen-year-old Earl Shonaker has passed in agony from lockjaw. His physicians are pessimistic that he is yet alive. He was an enthusiastic football player and in a game two weeks ago Saturday had his lower body lacerated by another boy's head. Little Earl was taken to it and developed lock jaw within a severe case of lockjaw.

QUAY'S SUCCESSOR MAY BE A DEMOCRAT.

Prospects Dark for Republicans in Pennsylvania.

Keystone State Democracy Needs Only to Be Firm and Active.

G. O. P. ALL SPLIT UP.

Senator Declares That if He Is Not Elected a Democrat Will Be.

HIS EXAMINATION TO-MORROW.

With State Treasurer Haywood He Will Face Charges of Conspiring to Use Public Funds.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—District Attorney Graham received a telegram today from State Treasurer Haywood in Chicago, saying that he would be here in the morning. His examination before Magistrate Jernon on the charge of conspiring with Senator Quay, the Senator's son "Dick" and Charles H. McKee to illegally use State funds will come up Wednesday noon.

There has been talk that Haywood, through his counsel, would waive examination and thus prevent a further spreading of the People's Bank scandal through the newspapers. Mr. Graham said decidedly to-day that such a course would not be permitted.

Mr. Haywood's letter to Cashier Hopkins, telling that another hundred thousand dollars from the State Treasury would be deposited in the People's Bank as soon as young Dick Quay's bond of $100,000 was arranged will be the principal bit of evidence.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

Senator Quay's letter to Cashier Hopkins, telling that another hundred thousand dollars from the State Treasury would be deposited in the People's Bank as soon as young Dick Quay's bond of $100,000 was arranged will be the principal bit of evidence.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

Senator Quay arrived from Washington to-night, and immediately went into conference with his attorneys at the Hotel Walton.

The Quay black book now holds the name of David Martin, Secretary of the Commonwealth. Quay believes now that the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. McKee, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. It is said that Martin pledged his support to the Attorney-General several months ago.

GIRL SHOT DEAD IN COUNTRY ROAD.

Her Father Heard Reports of Gun That Killed Her.

Paid No Attention, Believing Farm Hands Were Shooting Crows.

HE FOUND HER BODY.

Came Across It as He Walked Home at Dinner Time.

SUSPECTED MURDERER ARRESTED.

If Slightest Evidence Connecting Him with the Crime Is Secured There Will Be No Trial.

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 10.—Carrying the bleeding body of his sixteen-year-old daughter Daisy in his strong arms, Henry Smith, a farmer of this county, staggered to the porch of his residence at noon to-day. He had found the girl lying in the middle of the public road, riddled with bullets. He was preparing dinner in the kitchen when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

Farmer Smith, a well-to-do and respected man, lives in a comfortable dwelling along the public road, midway between Shamokin and Boiling Run. He has a large family and a large number of farm hands. He was out in the field when he heard a despairing cry from her husband, who hastened to the porch only to see her pretty girl lying dead and mutilated and her husband fainting by the side of the corpse. A man who is believed to have committed the crime has been captured. If sufficient evidence is secured to even remotely connect him with it, his case will never come to trial in a court of law.

JOHN F. CARROLL, NEW EXECUTIVE HEAD OF TAMMANY HALL.

John F. Carroll, Executive Head of Tammany Hall.

Mr. Croker has selected his friend to do the active work of leadership in Tammany, and yesterday Mr. Carroll resigned his place as Clerk of the Court of General Sessions. He is popular with the masses, and Mr. Croker expects that his leadership will be successful.

MRS. GEORGE'S BOY CHURCH WRESTLES WITH DIVORCES.

She Calmly Faced an Arraignment in Court Just Before.

Canton, Ohio, Oct. 10.—Anna E. George, charged with the murder of George D. Saxton, was arraigned before Justice Reigner to-day to enter her plea to the affidavit charging her with the murder. Long before the hour the court room was filled with men and women all anxious to see Mrs. George.

She was clad in a plain skirt of a gray color and a gaily colored shirt, waist and a jaunty hat trimmed in the season's style. She looked unconcerned. The eyes of everybody in the court room were upon her as she gazed about the room.

When Justice Reigner asked Mrs. George if she was guilty or not guilty to the charge against her in the affidavit, she seemed not disturbed in the least, but in a very weak and scarcely audible voice answered, "Not guilty."

Tuesday afternoon was agreed upon for the preliminary hearing, and Mrs. George was then taken back to the jail by Constable Henry.

"There is a glad that part is over," Mrs. George is said to have exclaimed in the reception room of the County Jail after her arrest. "I am not guilty, so let them prove I am." "I'm not guilty, so let them prove I am," she said.

Mrs. George, who has been exceedingly reticent, a seal apparently having been placed upon her lips by her counsel, momentarily threw off this strained caution and almost unconsciously gave vent to all her feelings. But she immediately relapsed into impenetrable silence and would say nothing more.

The most touching incident of the day was the temporary fission from the prison walls during her walk to and from the court. Two women, dressed in the same way and barred windows, and the faces of the women were visible as they passed by.

It is understood that she has declared that she will positively not attempt her own life, and this is believed by the jail authorities to the extent that the guard has been removed from her cell to an outer hall way, and some distance from her door. She evidently feels much relieved thereby.

The most touching incident of the day was the temporary fission from the prison walls during her walk to and from the court. Two women, dressed in the same way and barred windows, and the faces of the women were visible as they passed by.

It is understood that she has declared that she will positively not attempt her own life, and this is believed by the jail authorities to the extent that the guard has been removed from her cell to an outer hall way, and some distance from her door. She evidently feels much relieved thereby.

The most touching incident of the day was the temporary fission from the prison walls during her walk to and from the court. Two women, dressed in the same way and barred windows, and the faces of the women were visible as they passed by.

It is understood that she has declared that she will positively not attempt her own life, and this is believed by the jail authorities to the extent that the guard has been removed from her cell to an outer hall way, and some distance from her door. She evidently feels much relieved thereby.

Mr. Croker Selects His Friend for the High Honor.

Carroll Resigns His Court Clerkship, and His Brother Takes the Place.

A POWER IN POLITICS.

The Chief Once Before Deputed Leadership to Him and Was Not Disappointed.

BRAVES FOND OF NEW LEADER.

He Has Kept Promises with Them, and Has Won Their Respect by His Ability and Honesty.

John F. Carroll, who has long been recognized as the coming man in the Tammany Hall organization, yesterday resigned his office of clerk of the Court of General Sessions, an office worth in salaries and fees $12,000 per annum, in order to be free to devote all his time to the interests of Tammany Hall.

This step on the part of Mr. Carroll was no sudden move. It had been talked over for some time between Mr. Croker and him, and the resignation would have taken place at least two weeks ago had it not been for the absence of one of the judges of the court, whose presence was essential to the approval of Mr. Carroll's request to be relieved of his office. The judge returned to town yesterday, and the resignation was accepted at a special meeting of all the judges of the court. At the same meeting Edward J. Carroll, brother of John F. Carroll, was appointed to succeed him, and was immediately sworn in by Judge Fitzgerald.

Tammany's Executive Head. Mr. Carroll, it may be stated authoritatively, leaves the position, which he filled so long, to become the executive head of the Tammany organization. He will take the place and duties of the active leadership of the organization. He made enemies of which Mr. Croker regarded as equivalent to an attempt to usurp the leadership.

Mr. Carroll, at the meeting of Tammany's executive committee, to-morrow night, will make the chairman of the campaign committee and assume the responsible management of the local campaign, subject to the approval of the judges and advice of Mr. Croker. It is not likely, however, that there will be any active interference with the new executive head of the organization. He will take the place and duties of the active leadership of the organization. He made enemies of which Mr. Croker regarded as equivalent to an attempt to usurp the leadership.

Told Plans to Carroll. As long ago as before the State Convention, Mr. Croker sent for Carroll and told him that he wanted him to resign from the Court of General Sessions and assume the leadership of the organization. The Tammany chairman told his lieutenant that he, himself, felt no longer able to do all the work of the organization, and that it was imperative that these should be taken from his shoulders. He said to Mr. Carroll that, immediately after the election, he proposed to go abroad for a long rest, during which period the labor of leadership would devolve upon Mr. Carroll.

Mr. Carroll is personally known to almost every member of the organization, who trust him as they would trust Mr. Croker. He has never been known to break a promise once given, and in this respect alone if in no other he has won the regard and respect of every leader in the organization.

This is not the first time that executive power has been delegated by Mr. Croker to one of his subordinates in Tammany Hall. In all previous instances the experiment has proved to be more or less of a failure. When Mr. Croker resigned his place as chairman of the organization in the case of John F. Sheehan, there was bittering from the start, which was followed by a steady and steady progression toward dissolution. Mr. Sheehan was accused of seeking to supplant Mr. Croker in the leadership of the organization. He made enemies where he should have acquired new friends, and when Mr. Croker returned from abroad he found Tammany Hall in the condition of a house divided against itself. The same results attended the delegation of the leadership to other members of the organization.

Carroll Was the Leader. During Mr. Croker's last trip to Europe, Mr. Carroll was to all intents and purposes, the real leader of the organization, although at that time he had not been formally invested with its powers as he is to-day. Mr. Croker has not taken this step without grave deliberation, but so actively satisfied with his administration during his last absence that he determined to reward him by a fresh and complete delegation of the leadership of the organization to Mr. Carroll. Mr. Carroll was the right man in the right place.

Mr. Carroll is forty-three years old. He is of medium height and of portly figure, and is invariably dressed with the greatest care. His manner has often been characterized as cold. To his friends he is the soul of warmth. He is a man of few words, but is quick to think